The Squire's Sweetheart

KATHARINE TYNAN

WARD, LOCK & CO., LIMITED
London, Melbourne and Toronto

The gate in the boundary hedge, which he had known to be padlocked, was open. It seemed to him that he had given her a long start, but really it had been a very little time that he had stood in the Old Cottage, blissful because of the traces of her presence. There she was, going like a sleep-walker across the field path. Take a sleep-walker! The pirate came to him as he followed her, springing along the grass in the shadow, and he knew it was the truth, she was a sleep-walker. Some-one had power to put her soul asleep. The horn of the crescent moon was getting now well above the hill, but one side of the field was not yet out of the shadow.

He ran quickly and he overtook her. She did not utter a sound as he came beside her, where the field path began to dip down into the shadow of the hedge.

"My dear, my beloved child, come back," he said. "Why are you wandering into the night like this? I am so glad I happened to see you." She let him take her hand. It was chill and clammy. She looked at him as though she were between sleep and waking.

"I must go on," she said, in a queer muffled voice. "He is waiting by the Lover's Sile." He likes to see his power over me, making me come to him through the dark fields. How I hate him! How I hate him! God has forgotten me! Please let me go. He will come to meet me if I delay, and then I do not know what will happen."

"Come back with me, my little love," he said. "No one shall hurt you while I am with you. Come back to the cottage, out of the dark fields."

She sighed as though she were awakening. "It was cruel of him to make me come," she said. "I am so much afraid in the fields at night. He does it to test his power over me. He is waiting for me two fields away, watching till I come in sight. I am so afraid—the dead under my feet and the loneliness of the fields."

"My dearest," said the Squire, with a passionate tenderness, "come with me. He will have no more power over you—with the help of God."

CHAPTER XI.

Fear

Very quietly she turned about and went with him. They hastened back across the fields the way they had come. As they went, further and further away they heard the call of the plover. It seemed to become more and more impatient. Once or twice Dolly hesitated, made as though she would have stopped, then went on again, constrained by the firm grip of the Squire's fingers.

"Am I mauling your poor little hand, my dear?" he asked her. "Forgive me. We must hurry back and be quiet."

Presently he will come to see why I do not come," she said. "He will be fearfully angry. Oh, I am awake now. I hate him when I am awake. And yet he saved my life. Oh, Mr. Meyrick, what do you think of me?"

She sobbed at his ear and his heart was full of pain for her.

"I will tell you presently," he said, breathing hard. "May I come into the cottage if he comes? I must be here to defend you; unless you will go to your brother and let me meet him."

"Oh, no, no!" she said. "I would die if Leo knew. And Louise, Louise! She has such big eyes, and she will condemn me. She would not believe that he forces me to go."

She clung to him as though she were in an extremity of terror. They had reached the gate that led into the garden from the fields. They passed through it. He looked for the padlock, found it, and locked the gate. There was barely time to do this before she had begun to tremble excessively. He had to shield her, to protect her. There must be no talk. She must not be allowed to suffer in any way. Henceforth it was his business to protect her. Any one who did this precious creature wrong should answer to him.

The cottage door stood shut as he had left it. They passed within. The door was of oak and closed by a heavy beam. It would take a battering ram to force an entrance once the bar was drawn. He put her into a chair, then barred the door, stepped to the window and drew the heavy shutter.

"Is the rest of the house safe?" he asked. "All the windows are shuttered. I have been afraid here at night since the dog died."

"Does the light show without?" "No; with the shutters and the door closed the cottage is in complete darkness from the outside."

They stood facing each other. Suddenly she broke into a deep, quiet sobbing, which shook her. The sobs seemed to come from the depths of a lacerated heart. He stood looking at her, racked with pity and tenderness for her, his breast a sea of furious anger. He wanted to spring on the man who had gained this evil power over the girl he loved and rend him limb from limb.

"My poor little girl!" he said, putting a hand gently on her ruffled hair.

She drew closer to him. "I am terribly afraid of him," she said. "It is the second time he has happened. He laughed the first time and said that he thought he had the power, but was not quite sure of me. He had resisted him before."

"What happened?" asked the Squire, and the pause that followed seemed an eternity.

"Nothing at all happened. He said he was sorry, that he would not do it again. But he has done it. He has brought me out to talk to him at the hedge when I did not want to go; but he said he was sorry. If he is to have this power over me I shall drown myself. It is awful, awful. I remember hearing of those hypnotic influences in London. There was a girl who used to do strange things, under the power of suggestion they said. That would be terrible—not to feel your soul your own. I knew he was calling me to go to the Lover's Sile tonight. It began to come upon me as I sat here alone, working at my sketches of Susan. I tried to resist. I was terribly afraid. Then you came—oh, thank God you came! You turned me back. Do you think if I was to pray that God would help me? I have not been saying my prayers well since mamma died. All the world seemed to go wrong about me and I lost Leo. And—oh, I was angry, in rebellion."

The Squire lifted the tear-stained face. He looked down into the dilated eyes.

"Tell me, my dear," he said gently. "Tell me, and do not be afraid of me. I am going to help you to save you, so help me God! Have you ever cared for this man who has such power over you?"

"Careful? No!" she said, and the red flooded her face from brow to chin. Only the eyes remained steadfast. He said to himself with the warm blood rushing back to his heart that Mary Champey's eyes were not more innocent.

"No," she said again, and there was hurt amazement in her voice. "You know he saved my life. But a girl such as I am does not love a man like him. He is not a gentleman. There is something dreadful about him. He hates you because you are a gentleman, and because you are kind to me. I have always been afraid of him. He told me a day or two after he had done that for me that he meant to marry me. When he saw my face he laughed and said that he knew he was only a rough fellow—he had been roughing it, knocking about the world—but he could be a gentleman when he chose. He liked the rough life better, he said, but he could be a gentleman for my sake. When he saw the expression of my face he was angry. He said he would bring me to my senses—that he had sworn to marry me. I was so ashamed I did not dare to tell Leo. Oh, how good you are! I did not think I could tell anyone. I was so ashamed."

"My dear," said the Squire, "do you think you could forget that I am forty years of age, and going grey, and that you are in your lovely and brilliant youth, and be willing to marry me? I did not mean to ask you so hastily, but it is the only way."

He was saying to himself that the pulses which were leaping to his heart had nothing to do with procreant middle age; but he would not in the circumstances, let her see the passion in his eyes.

Was he mistaken, or did a swift joy flash into her face? He had never seen her like this before. Indeed, unless when she played with the child, she had always had a cloud of unhappiness, of sleep over her beauty. Her expression as she looked up at him dazzled him.

"It is because it is the only way."

"Ah, no, my dear," he said. "It is not that."

Not for worlds would he, in the strange equivocal position in which he found himself, have made passion a love to the girl who trusted him so entirely.

Life Saving Devices

Submarine warfare has resulted in numerous improvements in life preservers and buoys. The passengers on any ship that sails the Atlantic today are likely to find themselves bobbing about in the icy water with no support but a cork jacket. Some time ago a number of sailors on a torpedoed ship, saved their lives at night by signalling to the rescuers with little electric flash lamps. This principle has now been incorporated into the latest life buoy by an attachment which carries electric flash lamps as part of its equipment. The lamps burn steadily as soon as the buoy hits the water, and serve to indicate the position of the person supported to any boat that may be searching for survivors.

In proportion to its population Norway is the greatest seafaring nation in the world. On January 1, 1916, its mercantile marine consisted of 3,486 vessels, with a tonnage of 2,756,391, or an average of more than one ton for each inhabitant and practically the whole fleet is owned by Norwegian citizens.

"Do you save your money?" "Mister, if I saved my money I'd have to cheat the grocer and the coal man."

"He said I was an addled jackass. What would you advise me to do about it?" "See a good veterinary."

Women's Work

Secretary Lane condensed a volume in a few words when he suggested that the women of this country raise their own vegetables, can their own fruit, prevent waste in the home and inspire their men with patriotism. The waste of foodstuffs in this country in one week would feed the Belgians for a year.—Washington Post.

Throwing the Slipper

The popular custom of throwing the slipper after a wedding is said to have originated in France. An old woman seeing the carriage of her young king—Louis XIII—passing on the way from church, where he had just been married, took off her shoe and flung it at his coach, cried: "This all I have, your majesty, but may the blessings of heaven go with it!"

SGT. DUNCAN MACNEIL OF THE CANADIANS

says Dr. Cassell's Tablets Cured his Dyspepsia Completely

Sergeant Duncan MacNeil, of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, writing from Europe (his home address is 716, Pleasant street, Italian, N.S.) says: "For six years I suffered from frequent attacks of dyspepsia, when being in bed for days at a time. When the war broke out I joined the Expeditionary Force and came to England. I had not been long there, however, when my old trouble returned and I had to go to hospital. While in hospital I received one of Dr. Cassell's Tablets, and I decided to try them. The first had brought such pronounced relief that I continued the treatment. To make a long story short, a complete cure was effected."

A free sample of Dr. Cassell's Tablets will be sent to you on receipt of 5 cents for mailing and packing. Address: Harold P. Ritchie & Co., Ltd., 10, McCaul-st., Toronto.

Dr. Cassell's Tablets are the greatest remedy for Dyspepsia, Kidney Trouble, Bloodlessness, Anemia, Nervous Abnormalities, Nerve Paralysis, Palpitation, and Weakness in Children. Telephones in Japan
The manner in which the Japanese have taken to the telephone, is shown by the fact that there are some 150,000 persons and firms awaiting the installation of telephones on their premises. The government, which is in charge of the telephone service, is unable to keep pace with the demand for telephone service.

Must Tame Germany

United States Must Realize That the Place to Defend Her Nation Is in Europe

"The murder of Americans on the high seas is merely one symptom of a generalized disease. The Germany that gives orders to her submarines is the same Germany that wantonly precipitated this atrocious war; the same Germany that invaded Belgium and brought the torch and the firing squad to that offensive land; the same Germany that has barbarized civilian cities and re-established military slavery; the same Germany that would sack New York and ravage Texas via Mexico except kept otherwise busy by Britons, and Frenchmen, and Russians, and Italians, and Belgians, and Serbians and Roumanians, and Portuguese, and Montenegrins. In short German military circles the United States is called 'creation's richest crib,' and great is the longing to crack it. Were it not for the sacrifices other men are making we would not be free of anxiety."

When Hercules tackled the Lernaean hydra he did not confine himself to assaulting one head. An octopus which has seven arms left is not a pleasant companion, even though one is maimed. The place to fight a war is at its centre. Sanitary work must be done at the source of infection. We are not likely to induce Germany to respect maritime law until such a time as she is induced to respect other laws just as essential to human happiness. The plan of the Teutonic imperialist is to garrote self-government, and if she succeeds she succeeds altogether. Our peace must be made in conjunction with the general peace, and if we wish its early arrival every ounce of power should be applied toward securing this general peace. The best place to defend America is in Europe.—"New York Globe."

Use Miller's Worm Powders and the battle against worms is won. These powders correct the morbid conditions of the stomach which worms and their destructive parasites cannot exist after they come in contact with the medicine. The worms are digested by the powders and are speedily evacuated with or without the bowels. Soundness is imparted to the organs and the health of the child steadily improves.

A New Bond With Canada

Our entrance into the war should make a new bond between the Canadians and ourselves. One fraction of the western world has answered the call of imperilled liberty; a continent on which the Anglo-Saxon settlers sought to build a new structure dedicated to humanity, justice, freedom, has sent back its first regiments to assist in preserving Europe the ideals it has served in America. Let us trust that the time will be long before our own fraction of America carries our flag to trench lines behind which, at bay, barbarism is making its final stand and tyranny will keep the field. Canada has spoken—it remains for the United States to do its part in a common cause.—"New York Tribune."

Food for Body and Soul

The profit in gardening is an important matter. Of quite as great importance is it to gain the food for our souls in the delights of gardening. The growth of a plant from the seed is a common thing yet it is an ever delightful miracle wrought before our eyes. Every unfolding leaf, every blossom, each tiny blade of grass is a joy to the eye and food for the soul. Let us joy in it all. We need joy, much of it, in our lives. Spring is a renewal of life, an awakening of new thoughts and new spirit. Let us gladden all about us as we can and take joy in all that is charming and gladdening in the spring.—"Milwaukee Journal."

Vacant Lands a Menace To the Prairie Farmer

It Is Here That Gophers are Found in Greatest Numbers Practically Unmolested

According to provincial law, the rural municipalities and local improvements districts in Alberta have the power to levy a tax of two and one-half cents an acre on unoccupied lands, to be expended on poison and for labor in distribution. A somewhat similar law on the statute books of Saskatchewan. As gophers are found in large numbers on waste or unoccupied land, and since there are large areas of such land in the vicinity of most western farms, it becomes evident that it is not enough for a farmer to clear his own land of gophers, as a fresh colony will immediately take possession from the waste land near; the waste land as well as the farm itself must be attended to.

LIFT YOUR CORNS OFF WITH FINGERS

How to loosen a tender corn or callus so it lifts out without pain

Let folks stop on your feet here, for, where shoes are small, if you like, for corns will never again send electric sparks of pain through your feet, according to this Cincinnati authority.

He says that a few drops of a drug called freeze-out, applied directly upon a tender, aching corn, instantly relieves soreness, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts right out.

This drug drops at once and simply shrives up the corn or callus without even irritating the surrounding tissue.

The small bottle of freeze-out obtained at any drug store will cost very little but will positively remove every hard or soft corn of callus from one's feet.

If your druggist hasn't stocked this new drug yet, tell him to get a small bottle of freeze-out for you from his wholesale drug house.

Why Wheat Lodges

From an Italian experimental station comes a report of investigation into the causes of lodging in wheat. A high percentage of water in the stalks indicates a liability to lodge. It comes from three causes: high content of nutritive salts in the stalks, abundant moisture, and insufficient. The opposite holds good in the lack of a tendency to lodge, and a prolonged drought in plants raised in poor soil and kept in full light, eliminates any lodging tendency.

Fully manured plants were found to be subject to lodging, but if poorly irrigated or in a dry season there is little danger.

An Oil That Is Priced Everywhere

Dr. Thomsen Electric Oil was put up on the market without any flourish over thirty years ago. It was put up to meet the wants of a small section, but as soon as its merits became known it had a whole continent for a field, and it is now known, and prized throughout this hemisphere. There is nothing equal to it.

Bullet in Heart

A bullet moving about freely in a soldier's heart, though causing no discomfort, was the unique discovery of a French surgeon. After recovering from a wound received some months previously, the soldier insisted some foreign body was still present in his chest, and therefore a special X-ray examination was made. This brought to notice the free shrapnel bullet in the left ventricle of the heart, where it was being revolved about, and the entire extent of the cavity at each contraction of the heart.

No Necessity

The head of a boarding school noticed one of the boys wiping his knives on the table cloth and pounced upon him.

"Is that what you do at home?" he asked indignantly.

"Oh, no," answered the youngster coolly, "we have clean knives."—"Exchange."

He makes a great gain who loses a bad habit.

Ivory from North America

That much ivory in the future may be derived from American elephants seems at a glance a scarcely credible statement, but it is made thoroughly conceivable by George F. Kutz in a recent work upon ivory. In prehistoric ages several species of enormous elephants ranged the Americas and Siberia, which were then joined by a land bridge at Behring Strait. In the far north the tusks of these great animals have been well preserved by the cold and a large amount of valuable ivory has been unearthed in the islands north of Siberia. Alaska is a promising field for this sort of prospecting, which becomes more profitable as the supply of ivory from wild modern elephants decreases.

THE BEST MEDICINE FOR LITTLE ONES

Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine a mother can give her little ones. They are a gentle laxative—mild but thorough in action—and are guaranteed by a government analyst to be absolutely free from opiates and other injurious drugs. Concerning them Mrs. Anguste, St. James, Sask., writes: "Enclosed find twenty-five cents for another box of Baby's Own Tablets. I find them the very best medicine a mother can give her little ones." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Good For Nothing

One after another the disguises and subterfuges under which liquor has been masquerading are being stripped off, says a contemporary and the worthlessness of alcohol even as a stimulant is again and again emphatically recorded. The authority most lately heard from is Dr. J. P. Bile of Harvard Medical School, who in a recent lecture, said: "Alcohol is a good thing to be left absolutely alone and should never be used as a stimulant. It is worthless inwardly and outwardly."—"Ottawa Citizen."

Corns cannot exist when Holloway's Corn Cure is applied to them, because it goes to the root and kills the growth.

Quite Helpless

"It is shameful for you to come home in this condition," said Mrs. Jagby.

"You're right, 'm dear," answered Mr. Jagby. "But 'tellers I will with 'em, and shamelessly so."

"Impossible."

"Yesh they did 'm dear. They telephoned their wives to come and get 'em."—"Birmingham Age-Herald."

Shaving Single Handed in a Military Hospital

Only those who have been there can realize what the Gillette Safety Razor is doing for the wounded!

Clean shaving on the firing line, possible only with a Gillette, has saved endless trouble in dressing face wounds. In the hands of orderly or nurse it shortens by precious minutes the preparations for operating. Later, in the hands of the patients, it is a blessing indeed!

As soon as their strength begins to return, they get the Gillette into action, and fairly revel in the finishing touch which it gives to the welcome cleanliness of hospital life. For though he can use but one hand—and that one shaky—a man can shave himself safely and comfortably with a Gillette Safety Razor.

It may seem a little thing to you to send a Gillette to that lad you know Overseas, but to him it will mean so much! It will bring a touch of home comfort to his life on active service, and be even more appreciated if he gets "Bligh's".

One of Germany's Greatest Problems

When application was made in the British prize court for condemnation of several shiploads of lubricating oils and fats as enemy property, counsel read an affidavit from a member of the war trade intelligence department in which it was stated that the latest reports in the hands of the government showed 8,000 locomotives were laid up at Essen alone last month on account of wear and tear caused by scarcity of lubricating oils in Germany or by the employment of bad lubricants. The lubrication of railway engines was said to be one of the most pressing problems in Germany.

HUGE RAILWAY SHOPS

Efficiency in Repair Work Sought by Canadian Roads

The principal car repair plant of the Grand Trunk Railway for the lines west of the St. Clair River at Port Huron for many years was destroyed by fire during the winter of 1914-1915. Their old plant was of limited capacity and located at what was the old terminus of the line previous to the construction of the tunnel under the St. Clair River. After the fire negotiations were carried on between the town of Port Huron and the railroad, resulting in the acquisition of the property vacated by the Port Huron Thrasher Company, which property was very much more advantageously situated, being near the tunnel line.

The plant was first planned to consist of a power house containing a 160 h.p. boilers serving double turbine steam generating units of 300 k.w. for developing the electric power for lighting and operation of machines, all motor driven, a passenger car shop accommodating 37 modern passenger cars; a freight car shop accommodating 70 freight cars; and other buildings. These buildings, including track, were to take a space of approximately 55 acres; arranged for economical operation, special attention having been given to this feature to secure maximum efficiency. The total cost was estimated at $750,000.
